You Just Completed A Great Prospect Meeting . . .

Now What?

You have numerous things competing for your prospects attention and the more people and circumstances competing for your prospect's attention, well, that's less time to think about you, your company and your solution.

You're actually at your most vulnerable point in the sales cycle because you're not there to influence their thinking.

What do you do?

This worksheet will help!

It's the first step in staying top of mind with a prospect that simply has way too many things on their brain!

Please carve aside some "thinking" time to answer the questions on the next few pages and then, brainstorm them with your sales team!

Ready?

Let's begin!

Congrats!

You now have more options than you did before and more ways for you to keep it interesting for your prospects!

We're going to be talking more about this during our How To Close MORE Deals webinar on November 16th, at 11:30 am EST.

Here's what you'll gain by joining us;

- How to get in front of prospects who have a much higher degree of URGENCY to make a change NOW!
- How to get the right people into your meetings.
- How to disqualify your competitors from the running WITHOUT badmouthing them.
- How to emotionally charge up your prospects so they have buy in for making a change NOW!
- How to keep your prospect completely engaged between meetings, and your deal moving forward.
- How to create a communication plan so you avoid any of that lame "Calling to check in" BS.
- What to do when your prospect goes silent.
